A series of stamps "Tour de France 2002 - Departure in Luxembourg"

The Tour de France 2002 -Departure in Luxembourg

In 2002, the "Grande Boucle" begins in the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg: the City of Luxembourg: the National Minister of Education, Professional Training, and Sports as well as the Luxembourg Federation of Cycling Sports will be partner with the Tour de France Society to plan for the Departure in Luxembourg. P&TLuxembourg is also associated with this extraordinary sporting event as a partner.

Three days of pre-race activities and three days of racing will make the Grand Duchy a very lively place for almost a week. From Wednesday 3 July to Monday 8 July 2002 Luxembourg will be the centre of the cycling world as it celebrates the start of the Tour de France.

The 0,45 € stamp shows, on a watercolour background, the official logo of the 2002 Departure in Luxembourg.

François Faber, champion cyclist and winner of the Tour in 1909

François Faber was born in Aulnay-sur-Iton (France) on 26 January 1887, the child of a French mother and a Luxembourg father. When he reached the age of majority, he chose Luxembourg citizenship and earned a living at first as a longshoreman. In 1906, he began cycling with a bicycle purchased on credit.

His height of 1.89 metres and his 90 kilos of muscles made him worthy of the nickname "Giant from Colombes". A well-conditioned athlete in excellent health, François Faber was one of the greatest champions of his era and won the Tour in 1909 after victory barely eluded him the previous year.

When war broke out in 1914, Faber enlisted in the Foreign Legion, and was killed in a battlefield in Artois at the Bonneval farm on 9 May 1915.

The engraving on the stamp is based on a photo of the era.

"The Champion" (Joseph Kutter - 1894-1941)

Joseph Kutter was, without doubt, one of the great painters of Luxembourg. Often, his subjects are placed in the foreground of his paintings in the style of photographers of the era. His portraits were painted with strong brushstrokes and the large noses, which Kutter gave his human figures, always attract the attention of visitors.

The painting "The Champion", kept in the National Museum of Art and History in Luxembourg, was painted in 1932, and it was the great Luxembourg racing cyclist Nicolas Frantz (1899-1985) who inspired Kutter for this work.

Nicolas Frantz was a two-time winner of the Tour de France (1927 and 1928) and he took 2nd place in 1924 and 1926, winning a total of 20 stages of the Grande Boucle and several other classic cycling races. Nicolas Frantz is the only racer to have worn the yellow jersey from start to finish of a Tour de France.

- Price of the series: 3,42 €;

"L'Enfer du Nord": sous ce surnom synonyme de peine et de gloire, d'extrême difficulté pour les hommes et les machines, la course Paris-Roubaix – qui fête en 2002 sa 100^e édition – nourrit depuis plus d'un siècle la légende du sport cycliste.

Les pavés du Nord sont à Paris-Roubaix ce qu'une montagne est au Tour de France. "The Hell of the North": With this nickname so synonymous of suffering and glory, and of extreme difficulty for both men and machines alike, the Paris - Roubaix race (which will be held for the hundredth time in 2002) has been proudly keeping alive the spirit of cycling for over a century.

The cobbles of the North are to the Paris - Roubaix race what the mountain passes are to the Tour de France. They have made this race, (founded in 1896 at the initiative of Théodore Vienne and Maurice Perez, two factory owners from Roubaix, and interrupted only for the First World War) a truly exceptional event.

"The 'hardest knocks' are always found atop the cobbles", said the writer Antoine Blondin. In fact, on a surface which is ideal for stunning exploits but also for painful falls, the Paris - Roubaix was once a merciless "machine" for selecting future champions. Both dreaded and highly prized at the same time, it was won by names as prestigious as Fausto Coppi, Louison Bobet or Bernard Hinault. History has preserved the records of victories by Roger De Vlaeminck (four wins between 1972 and 1977) and that of the hourly average of Peter Post (45.129 km per hour in 1964). It also demonstrated the undeniable superiority at the end of the century of the Belgian racers who managed to clock up 47 victories compared to 30 French wins (including 17 during the first 20 years of the event). In the tradition of Roger De Vlaeminck, his countrymen Octave Lapize, Gaston Rebry, Rik Van Looy, Eddy Merckx and Francesco Moser each triumphed three times in the race which connoisseurs referred to as "The Queen of Classics".

Today, the Paris - Roubaix covers some 254.5 kilometres (the year 2001 distance), of which there are no less than 50 kilometres of cobbles. To retain its unusual nature, it has been necessary to gradually keep pace with the road improvements by moving the route towards the north-east. Setting off from Compiègne, the race today crosses two regions (Picardy and the Nord-Pas de Calais), and finishes at the Velodrome in Roubaix after having passed through some strategic points such as the Wallers-Arenberg trench and the crossroads of L'Arbre where the legend of the "Hell of the North" is very much alive and well.

L'"Enfer du Nord": sous ce surnom synonyme de peine et de gloire, d'extrême difficulté pour les hommes et les machines, la course Paris-Roubaix – qui fête en 2002 sa 100^e édition – nourrit depuis plus d'un siècle la légende du sport cycliste.

Les pavés du Nord sont à Paris-Roubaix ce que les cols de haute montagne sont au Tour de France. Ils ont donné son statut d'exception à cette course – créée en 1896 à l'initiative de deux industriels roubaisiens, Théo Vienne et Maurice Perez – et interrompue durant la Première Guerre mondiale. "Le haut du pavé se retrouve toujours sur les pavés du haut", affirmait l'écrivain Antoine Blondin. De fait, sur un terrain qui se prête aux plus beaux exploits mais aussi aux plus terribles chutes, Paris-Roubaix fut de tout temps une impitoyable machine à sélectionner les champions. Redoutée et convoitée à la fois, elle fut remportée par des noms aussi prestigieux que Fausto Coppi, Louison Bobet ou Bernard Hinault. L'histoire retiendra le record de victoires de Roger De Vlaeminck (quatre entre 1972 et 1977) et celui de la moyenne horaire de Peter Post (45,129 km/h en 1964). Elle soulignera aussi l'indéniable supériorité, au fil du siècle, des coureurs belges, qui totalisent 47 victoires contre 30 aux Français (dont 17 durant les 20 premières éditions). Dans la lignée de Roger De Vlaeminck, ses compatriotes Octave Lapize, Gaston Rebry, Rik Van Looy et Eddy Merckx ainsi que Francesco Moser ont remporté trois fois chacun l'épreuve que les connaisseurs appellent la "reine des classiques".

Dans sa version contemporaine, Paris-Roubaix couvre quelque 254,5 km (parcours 2001), dont pas moins de 50 km de pavés. Pour lui conserver sa singularité, il a fallu, au fur et à mesure de l'amélioration du réseau routier, déplacer le tracé vers le Nord-Est. Au départ de Compiègne, la course traverse aujourd'hui deux régions (la Picardie puis le Nord-Pas-de-Calais) et s'achève sur le vélodrome de Roubaix, après avoir franchi des points stratégiques tels que la tranchée de Wallers-Arenberg et le carrefour de l'Arbre, où se perpétue la légende de "l'Enfer du Nord".

Die Hölle des Nordens": Dieser Beiname, der für Mühe und Ruhm steht, veranschaulicht die extremen Schwierigkeiten des Radrennens Paris-Roubaix für Mensch und Material. 2002 wird das 100. Rennen veranstaltet, das somit seit über einem Jahrhundert zu den Legenden des Radsports gehört.

Die Pflasterstraßen Nordfrankreichs sind für Paris-Roubaix das Gegenstück zu den Bergpässen der Tour de France. Auf ihnen beruht der Ausnahmestatus dieses 1896 auf Initiative von zwei Unternehmern aus Roubaix, Théo Vienne und Maurice Perez, gegründeten Rennens, das nur während des Ersten Weltkriegs ausgesetzt wurde. "Le haut du pavé se retrouve toujours sur les pavés du haut", schrieb einst der Schriftsteller Antoine Blondin (frei übersetzt: "Die Besten treffen sich immer auf den Pflasterstraßen des Nordens"). Und in der Tat war Paris-Roubaix mit seinen Straßen, auf denen die schönsten Meisterleistungen, doch auch die schlimmsten Stürze möglich sind, seit jeher ein unerbittlicher Wettkampf für die Auswahl der Besten. Den Sieg bei diesem ebenso gefährdeten wie begehrten Rennen trugen so berühmte Rennfahrer wie Fausto Coppi, Louison Bobet oder Bernard Hinault davon. Zur Geschichte des Radrennsports gehört der Siegrekord von Roger De Vlaeminck (vier Siege zwischen 1972 und 1977) und der Geschwindigkeitsrekord von Peter Post (mit einem Stundendurchschnitt von 45,129 km/h in 1964). Und sie bestätigt auch die eindeutige Überlegenheit der belgischen Radrennfahrer, die dieses Rennen im Laufe des Jahrhunderts 47 mal gewonnen haben, gegenüber 30 Siegen von Franzosen (davon 17 in den 20 ersten Rennen). So gewannen in der Nachfolge von Roger De Vlaeminck seine Landsleute Octave Lapize, Gaston Rebry, Rik Van Looy, Eddy Merckx und Francesco Moser jeder 3-mal diesen Wettkampf, der von den Kennern als die "Königin der Klassiker" bezeichnet wird.

In seiner heutigen Version umfasst das Rennen Paris-Roubaix rund 254,5 km (der Parcours 2001), davon nicht weniger als 50 km Pflasterstraßen. Um diesem Rennen seine Einzigartigkeit zu bewahren, musste der Streckenverlauf immer weiter nach Nord-Osten verlegt werden, je weiter das Straßennetz modernisiert wurde: Nach dem Start in Compiègne durchquert das Rennen heute zwei französische Regionen (die Picardie und dann die Region Nord-Pas-de-Calais) und geht im Velodrom in Roubaix zu Ende, nachdem strategische Punkte angefahren wurden, wie der Graben von Wallers-Arenberg und die Kreuzung des Baums ("le carrefour de l'Arbre"), wo die Legende der "Hölle des Nordens" weiterlebt.

El Infierno del Norte": con este apodo, sinónimo de pena y de gloria, de extrema dificultad para los hombres y las máquinas, la carrera Paris-Roubaix – que festeja en 2002 su centésima edición – alimenta desde hace más de un siglo la leyenda del deporte ciclista.

Los adoquines del Norte son a Paris-Roubaix lo que los puertos de alta montaña al Tour de Francia. Han dado su estatus de excepción a esta carrera – creada en 1896 por iniciativa de dos industriales de Roubaix, Théo Vienne y Maurice Perez, y que se interrumpió durante la Primera Guerra mundial. "Lo alto del adoquín siempre se encuentra sobre los adoquines de lo alto", afirmaba el escritor Antoine Blondin. De hecho, sobre un terreno que se presta a las más extraordinarias hazañas, pero también a las más terribles caídas, Paris-Roubaix fue en todas las épocas una despiadada máquina para seleccionar a los campeones. Temida y codiciada a la vez, fue ganada por nombres tan prestigiosos como Fausto Coppi, Louison Bobet o Bernard Hinault. La historia recordará el récord de victorias de Roger De Vlaeminck (cuatro entre 1972 y 1977) y el de la media horaria de Peter Post (45,129 km/h en 1964). También destacará la indiscutible superioridad, a lo largo del siglo, de los corredores belgas, que totalizan 47 victorias, frente a 30 los franceses (de las cuales 17 durante las 20 primeras ediciones). En el linaje de Roger De Vlaeminck, sus compatriotas Octave Lapize, Gaston Rebry, Rik Van Looy, Eddy Merckx y Francesco Moser también han ganado tres veces cada uno la prueba que los expertos denominan la "reina de las clásicas".

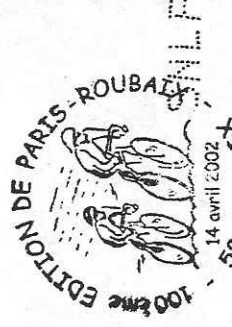

En su versión contemporánea, Paris-Roubaix cubre unos 254,5 km (recorrido 2001), de los cuales no menos de 50 km de adoquines. Para que conserve su singularidad, ha sido necesario desplazar el trazado hacia el noreste a medida que mejoraba la red vial. Con salida de Compiègne, la carrera atraviesa actualmente dos regiones (la Picardie y Nord-Pas-de-Calais) y finaliza en el velódromo de Roubaix, después de haber atravesado puntos estratégicos como la trinchera de Wallers-Arenberg y la intersección del Arbre, en donde se perpetúa la leyenda del "Infierno del Norte".

CLUB LOGO

The club's officials consider that it's about time we had a "Logo" that could appear on the cover of Bicycle Stamps and official correspondence.

As there may be many creative individuals amongst our members, we have decided to ask members to submit designs; these will be judged by the club's officials and a suitable design adopted.

At this stage we do not need "artwork" - what we are looking for is ideas. The "Logo" should be no larger than 5 x 5 cm.

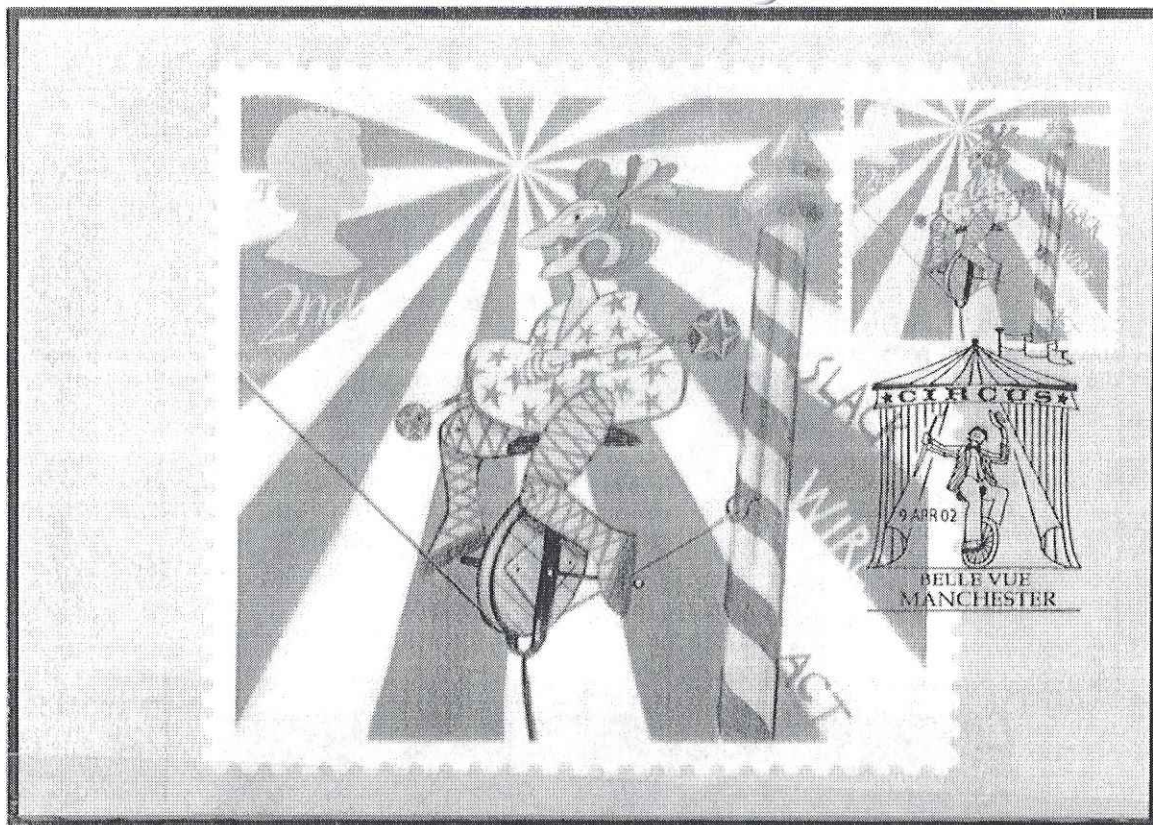

So, jump off your bikes, close those stamp albums and put your thinking caps on. All ideas should be sent to the Secretary.
